A new reality

Julie Snyder is known for her colorful and energetic works of art that are highly praised by collectors and other artists. The majority of her work is done in the studio using live models to recreate scenes which then become the subject of her paintings.

"My painting is much like poetry, an illusion and a vision. Instead of words, I use the brush to capture the essential fragments and facets of an intimate communication between the viewer and the subject," says Snyder. "I love the moment when chaos and order dance with each other on the canvas—what's deliberate and what almost paints itself. There is a timelessness I bring to my work that allows me to transform the images of everyday life into a new reality."

Snyder is represented in Southern California by DanielakArt in Pasadena and by Segil Fine Art in Monrovia. The two galleries will co-host an exhibition featuring Snyder's latest works from January 12-31, 2009, at the Segil Fine Art location. On the East Coast, she is represented by Addison Art Gallery in Cape Cod. ●
